TEXAS CAPITAL BANK MOVES INTO NEW NAMESAKE BUILDING
New HQ and operations center designed to accommodate growth

DALLAS (Feb. 26, 2009) – Texas Capital Bank has moved into its new headquarters building. Its corporate headquarters and a banking center occupy 100,000 square feet of the recently completed Texas Capital Bank Building at 2000 McKinney Ave. in Dallas’ burgeoning Uptown area. The Bank’s headquarters and banking center were previously across the street at 2100 McKinney Ave.

Lincoln Property Company and Corrigan Properties, Inc., developed the 20-story mixed-use Texas Capital Bank Building, which offers 445,000 square feet of class “AA” commercial office space, as well as retail space on the ground floor. The back of the building overlooks the planned 5.2-acre Woodall Rodgers Park to be built on top of the freeway of the same name.

In another sign of the Bank’s growth, Texas Capital Bank signed a lease on 80,000 square feet of Class A space at 2350 Lakeside in Richardson to house support operations in a larger facility. In June, 200 employees will move to the new space from their current location at 6060 N. Central Expy. in Dallas.

“Texas Capital Bank is growing and these moves accommodate our current needs as well as our future growth requirements,” said George Jones, CEO of Texas Capital Bank.
